ELDER LAW MINUTE

As an Elder Law Attorney, I am often contacted by personal care homes, home health care agencies and continuing care retirement communities in their effort to obtain referrals. I am rarely excited by these solicitations.

Recently, however, I met with the founder of a new company who is offering a service which I found to be unique and important to seniors and their families, as well as younger individuals.

The Company is called Fiscability. It is run by Stephen Filreis who is a seasoned accountant and finance professional. Steve recognized that in today's hectic world, many people don't have the time to properly handle their personal finances. While some may delegate these tasks to their secretaries, many would prefer to keep their personal matters confidential.

Fiscability was developed to help individuals and small businesses keep up with their bills and bank statements, monitor their investments, organize their tax records and file payroll forms. Steve can make sure that deposits are made on time, bills are paid and finances are monitored for fraudulent activity. He can also coordinate the activities of his clients' attorneys and financial advisors.

After meeting with Steve, I realized that just like hiring a housekeeper or a landscaper provides a tremendous sense of relief to over-worked homeowners who otherwise would be responsible for these tasks themselves, hiring a company like Fiscability to be responsible for one's personal finances would have that same benefit.

I have thoroughly examined this company and am confident that it is a totally professional organization. Steve is highly qualified and is not using this service to sell any products.

While I don't normally use this forum to promote a product or service, I was so impressed with Steve and the service that his company provides that I wanted to share it with you. If you want to learn more about Fiscability go to www.fiscability.com.
